A small statement with a big message:

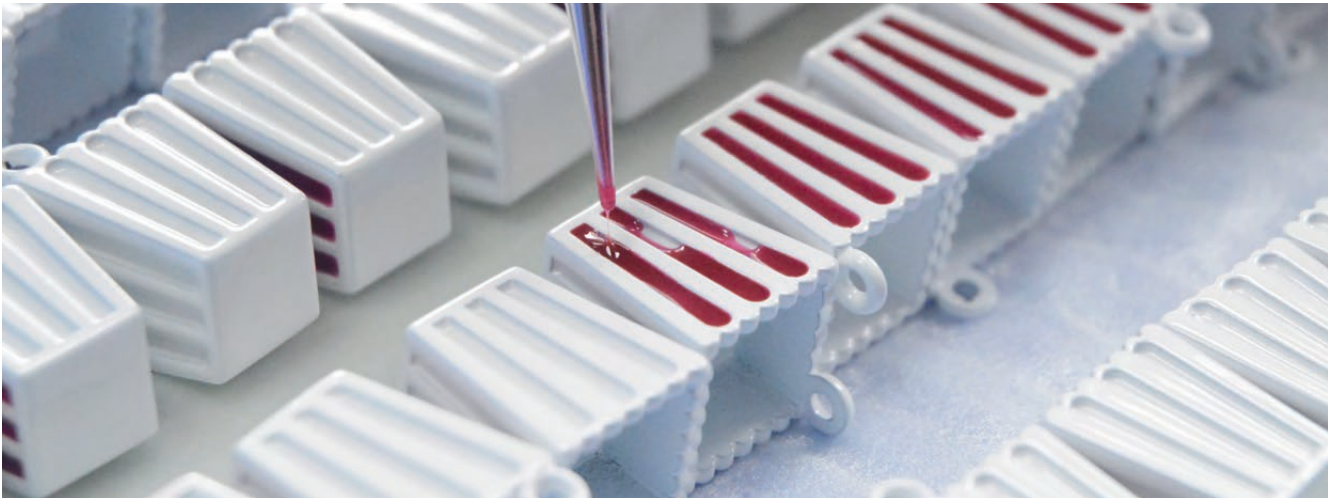

Meta[!]morphose creates a mini world with the things you love from the big world.
Ready to show your personality and take it everywhere with you?

Happily designed in Belgium Proudly created in China

Did you know that metalmorphose® products don't just roll out of machines, but that dozens of manual steps are made to create each product? This makes our team a true "craftmanship"-team who master the techniques to make each individual product match our standards. By applying this way-of-work we keep a grip on the continuity in end-finish and guarantee that each product has its individual quality control.

What They Don't Teach You at Harvard Business School

I don't think you have to play politics in order to get ahead. Have you ever noticed that the people who complain about office politics are always its victims? But I do think you have to make some friends. In fact, this is essential. In order to be effective you have to develop lasting relationships inside the company as well as outside. The bigger the company, the more important this becomes. Again, see your peers as your allies, not as your competition. If you can hitch your wagon to a few of your company's brightest stars, you will climb right up the ladder with them.

and an answer. Show people in other departments to work with them, instead of conveying the answer somehow they work for you. You will find that when you have peer-group support, it will be there.

Pick Your Shots

The quickest way to lose credibility is to rage about minor offenses because of a big slip over major ones. This is the corporate version of getting a splinter in the eye tube. We're all susceptible to it, but a slip from the middle shows immaturity. Your judgment is all over the place. Most companies do not have the time to psychobabble you to find out where the real problem is. Your judgment is all over the place. When you join a new company at any level, the job comes with a certain amount of chaos. All employees are susceptible to it, but a slip what - to use these chances to reveal your lack of judgment. Moments you looking for another opportunity to reveal your lack of judgment.
